Here's what critics said about the Spring 2015 production of BREAKING THE CODE:

"Alan Turing comes to life in 'Breaking the Code'... Unlike the film, with a Hollywood spin and too-clever banter that leaves the audience wondering what really happened, Hugh Whitmore's 1986 'Breaking the Code' – onstage at the Eureka Theatre in an elegant Theatre Rhinoceros production – is a far more satisfying and fulfilling depiction of the life of the scientist, whose admission of homosexuality in the 1950s derailed a remarkable (if little-known) life and career. John Fisher does terrific double duty in the Theatre Rhino show, both directing and portraying Turing, the brilliant yet socially awkward character whose creativity, single-mindedness and iconoclasm posthumously earned him the title "father of computer science." The ensemble wonderfully complements Fisher in Whitmore's drama, which remains clear as it flashes back and forth." - Leslie Katz – SF Examiner

**** (4 out of 4 stars)

"Everyone should see 'Breaking the Code' for the acting, the characterizations, the set, the sexiness, the unconventional style." - Barry Horowitz – TheatreStorm.com

"Not only is John Fisher brilliant in his acting, his direction is equally luminous. He makes the play's two hours race by." - Woody Weingarten – Marinscope / For All Events

"'Breaking the Code' is memorable for its cast's terrific performances." - Joe Kukura – sfist.com

'Breaking the Code' comes to a beautiful kind of peace with itself without resorting to any kind of cop-out that softens the blow. It's a delicate and heartbreaking eulogy about the unfairness of the world." - Adam Brinklow – Edgeonthenet.com

"A thought provoking production... John Fisher gives a marvelously genuine performance as Alan Turing. A good old-fashioned, intelligent play, multilayered in its examinations of loyalty and national expediency. Sharply directed." - Richard Connema – Talkinbroadway.com

Breaking the Code by Hugh Whitmore is a gripping biographical drama about homosexual scientist Alan Turing, the eccentric genius who fought on two fronts. Turing played a major role in winning the World War II, and he also battled with British morality. He broke the complex German code called Enigma, enabling allied forces to foresee Nazi u-boat maneuvers. Since his work was classified top secret for years after the war, no one knew how much was owed to him when he was put on trial for breaking another code - the taboo against homosexuality. Turing, who was also the first to conceive of and basically invent the computer, the machine that forever altered our modern world, was convicted of the criminal act of homosexuality and sentenced to undergo hormone treatments which left him physically and mentally debilitated. He died a suicide, forgotten and alone. This play is about who he was, what happened to him and why.

Renown British actor Derek Jacobi took the London (1986) and Broadway theatre community (1987 – 3 Tony nominations) by storm in this exceptional biographical drama. Breaking The Code was produced by the BBC in 1996 and broadcast on PBS in the USA. The Imitation Game (2014) – a feature film about Alan Turing opened theatrically world-wide - wowing critics and audiences alike. (Nominated for 8 Academy Award - won for best adapted screenplay, and for 5 Golden Globe Awards.)

BIOS:

Hugh Whitmore (born 1936) is an English playwright and screenwriter. Whitmore studied for the stage at London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, where he is now a Member of the Council. He began his writing career in British TV with both original teleplays and adaptations of classic works by Charles Dickens, W. Somerset Maugham, Daphne du Maurier, and Charlotte Brontë, among others, and twice won a Writers' Guild of Great Britain award. His work for American TV includes Concealed Enemies, about the Alger Hiss case, and The Gathering Storm, which focused on a troubled period in the marriage of Clementine and Winston Churchill just prior to World War II. He won an Emmy Award for each. He also was nominated for his adaptation of the Carl Bernstein/Bob Woodward book about President Nixon, The Final Days. His most recent teleplay was My House in Umbria, an adaptation of the novella by William Trevor starring Maggie Smith. He also wrote the episode, "Horrible Conspiracies," for the 1971 BBC series, Elizabeth R.

Whitmore's film credits include: Man at the Top (1973), All Creatures Great and Small (1975), The Blue Bird (1976), The Return of the Soldier (1982), 84 Charing Cross Road (1987), and Utz (1992).

The plots of Whitmore's plays frequently focus on historical figures. Stevie (1977) centred on the life of English poet and novelist Stevie Smith and Pack of Lies (1983) covered events leading up to the arrest of the Krogers, two Americans spying for the Russians, in London in 1961. Whitmore's best known work taking the form of a staged biography is Breaking the Code (1986) which is centered on Alan Turing, who was responsible for cracking the German Enigma code during World War II and resisted an adherence to the English code of sexual discretion with his homosexuality, for which he was charged with gross indecency. This work was adapted as a TV film in 1996. The Best of Friends (1987), about the friendship Dame Laurentia McLachlan, the Abbess of Stanbrook Abbey in Worcestershire, shared with George Bernard Shaw and Sydney Cockerell, director of the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge. His most recent was As You Desire Me, a 2005 adaptation of the play by Luigi Pirandello. Whitmore is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature.
